Rakamin is the only learning platform that gives students a holistic psychological approach to have optimum learning output

Most people stuck with their career because they don't

- Know themselves
- Know their career relevance
- Know their career aspiration
- Don't have clear planning and guidance

The Marshmallow experiment

The Marshmallow experiment

The longer the young children were able to wait (success to set the goal), the better the SAT scores, the better their ability to control themselves and to pursue their academic and other goals successfully—[as reported] by parents and by teachers, and the better their own reports about how they were doing as people in their early 30s.

Your ability to set your goal, pursue that with resilience and passion, is the most basic resource for success

But can you work so hard with your goal if you don't even know your interest and don't even know your career aspiration?

Let's discuss about your assessment
